Summary report:	Miss Mrunal conducted an activity on verbal and non-verbal communication; concepts were demonstrated using a robotic scenario. The robot, unable to see, could only listen to the communicator's verbal instructions. Meanwhile, the communicator could see the person performing actions (the visualizer) but could not see the robot. The visualizer, unable to speak, had to convey instructions through actions alone. The communicator's role was to interpret these non-verbal cues and guide the robot verbally. This activity highlighted the challenges of relaying messages accurately through verbal and non-verbal channels, emphasizing the importance of clear communication.
Outcome:	Students understood the significance of clear communication, recognizing how verbal and non-verbal cues play a crucial role in accurately conveying messages and overcoming potential barriers.
